

Dr. Ame Stormer, is Helen Keller's Senior Technical Advisor for the Asia Pacific Region. She provides strategic, programmatic and monitoring and evaluation guidance and support to programs in the Asia Pacific Region. She previously served as Helen Keller International's Regional Director of Programs for Asia Pacific, overseeing all technical issues for nutrition, eye health, food security and other areas for the seven country programs in Asia. Before coming to Helen Keller International, Dr. Stormer was the Civic Engagement Branch Chief and Program Director for the US Department of Defense's (DoD) European Command's (EUCOM) Humanitarian Assistance Program, where she oversaw a $15M program of essential services to civilian populations living in the Baltics, Balkans and Caucaus regions. Prior to joining DoD, Dr. Stormer served as the Director of Monitoring and Evaluation for the A2Z project, USAID's flagship micronutrient program, at the Academy for Educational Development. Her other international and domestic experience includes working for Family Health International, the Center of Human Nutrition at UCLA; the World Rehabilitation Fund in El Salvador; Plan International in Columbia and the World Bank. Dr. Stormer has a Masters degree in international development from The American University and a Masters degree in public health from UCLA. She received her Doctorate in epidemiology and international health from the Tulane School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine.