

Chelsie Kolberg, MPH, RD

Chelsie Kolberg has her Masters in Public Health from UNC Chapel Hill and is a Registered Dietitian working in international food security and nutrition programs with Rise Against Hunger. She utilizes Social and Behavior Change Communication in Nutrition-Sensitive Agriculture programs, advises on nutrient quality of distributed and locally procured foods, and writes a monthly blog-style post to inform the organization of relevant nutrition topics. Chelsie believes that international programming should remove barriers and allow locals to drive their own development. She looks to reform and challenge existing structures of “West knows best” ideologies both within herself and the world around her. (ckolberg@riseagainsthunger.org)
